

Presenting the Best of Cebit

May 26, 2004

These are the products that knocked our socks off when they were displayed at this New York City trade show.

After combing through dozens of product submissions from hundreds of vendors, the editors of eWEEK and PC Magazine have selected these nine as the best of the thousands of new products and technologies on display at this year's CeBit America technology trade show. The winners of and finalists for these awards were announced today in a ceremony on the show floor.

In order to be considered for these awards, products had to be displayed at the show (on the show floor or in a public meeting room) and had to be newly available between February 1 and July 31 of this year.

Enterprise Systems Defense

Winner:

Secure Systems Enterprise Data Vault

To address data security at a fundamental level, Secure Systems encrypts the raw data on both fixed and mobile storage devices and adds the further protection of flexible partitioning and integral audit facilities. With early boot authentication that surpasses operating-system protections, the company's PCI desktop module and standard laptop 2.5-inch drive meet the concerns—and increasingly, the regulatory requirements—of enterprises handling sensitive commercial and customer data.
